Bangladesh slips by 2 points in global corruption perceptions index, ranks 149
TIB demands a national anti-corruption strategy

Bangladesh scored 26 on a scale of 0-100 among 180 countries in Transparency International's (TI) Corruption Perceptions Index (CPI) 2018. Bangladesh score has moved downward by 2 points than last year, which is much lower than the global average score of 43 and both in rank and score among eight South Asian countries, Bangladesh’s position remains 2nd lowest for 6th consecutive years; lower than all except Afghanistan. With this score, Bangladesh placed 149th from the top and 13th from the bottom. In 2017, Bangladesh was in 143rd from the top and 17th from the bottom. According to TI Bangladesh, this performance portrays the prevalence of a worrying level of corruption in Bangladesh. Against this backdrop, TI Bangladesh called upon the government to take a stricter position and effective measures in realizing its political commitment to prevent corruption.

On the global release of CPI 2018, in a press conference held on 15 January, 2019 at its head office in Dhaka Dr Iftekharuzzaman, Executive Director of TI Bangladesh presented the global findings and explained Bangladesh’s score and other matters related to it. Produced by the research team of TI-Secretariat, the 2018 Corruption Perceptions Index (CPI) by Transparency International reveals that the continued failure of most countries significantly to control corruption is contributing to a crisis of democracy around the world.

Mentioning Bangladesh’s performance as embarrassing, Dr. Zaman termed it as ‘steepest fall in a single year since 2008 (same as in 2014 when the score fell from 27 in 2013 to 25).’ Bangladesh is positioned among more than two-thirds of 180 countries who scored below 50 and secured 4th lowest position among 31 Asia-Pacific countries. Other countries who scored the same with Bangladesh are the Central African Republic and Uganda, he added.

According to CPI 2018, among South Asian countries, Bhutan is on the top (score 64, rank 25 from top) while Afghanistan remains in the bottom scoring only 16 with 172nd position which is globally the fourth lowest, and 2nd lowest in the Asia-Pacific region. Except for Bhutan, all South Asian countries have received lower than the global average of 43. India ranked 78th with a score of 41. Sri Lanka scored 38 with 89th in the rank, followed by Pakistan that scored 33 with 117th position. Maldives and Nepal jointly share 124th position scoring 31. Afghanistan ranked 172nd with a score of 16. Denmark and New Zealand top the CPI 2018 with 88 and 87 points, respectively. Somalia, South Sudan and Syria are at the bottom of the index, with 10, 13 and 13 points, respectively.

Dr. Iftekharuzzaman said, “Bangladesh could have performed better as it has ability and efficiency enough to do so. One of the factors which might have contributed to Bangladesh's poor performance in the global index, is lack of effective implementation of the anti-corruption commitment or political will though we do have such declarations. Among others, especially factors like rarely addressed high-profile corruption, pervasive conflict of interest, political and government position perceived as means of enrichment, unabated financial and banking sector crisis including loan default and bank fraud, grabbing of land, river and water bodies, political control of contracting and recruitment business embarrassingly high and unabated illicit financial transfers; weakening institutions of accountability; deficit in effectiveness and independence of ACC; denial syndrome, impunity, weakening rule of law; shrinking media and civil society space etc might also have contributed to the recent performance.

Commenting that no country can control corruption instead of political commitment and application by the higher echelon, Dr. Zaman said, “The recent statements of the Prime Minister (PM) on zero tolerance against corruption, is a reflection of her political will. However, effective implementation of this declaration should be ensured through applying it irrespective of status or identity. For this, it is significant to formulate a national anti-corruption strategy in consultation with relevant experts and stakeholders. If such a versatile and time-bound strategy can be applied in short, medium and long term with fair monitoring, Bangladesh will surely perform well in the global ranking.”

Dr. Zaman further added that because of the lack of proper understanding about CPI people of the country is blamed to be corrupt which is not right. “Majority of the people here are not corrupt but rather victims of it and because of the failure of our leadership to fight against the corruption of the powerful echelon they can never be blamed.” Dr. Zaman concluded.
TIB finds anomalies in the Eleventh National Election

Electoral irregularities like stamping ballot papers the night before the polls and ballot stuffing by capturing booths on the Election Day took place in 47 out of 50 constituencies surveyed, says a TIB study on the 11th parliamentary polls. Other irregularities include silence of law enforcers and administrative officials, casting fake votes, barring voters from going to polling stations, forcing voters to cast vote for a specific symbol and barring polling agents from going to centers, the study found.

To unveil the study findings titled ‘Election Process Tracking: the Eleventh National Parliament Election’ Transparency International Bangladesh (TIB) organized a Press Conference at its Dhaka office on 15 January 2019. TIB Chairperson of the Board of Trustees Advocate Sultana Kamal, Executive Director Dr. Iftekharuzzaman, Adviser-Executive Management Professor Dr. Sumaiya Khair, and Director-Research & Policy Mohammad Rafiqul Hassan were present. Senior Programme Manager Shahzada M Akram presented the report’s findings and recommendations. Programme Manager Taslima Akter, Juliet Rossette and Kumar Bishwajit Das; Assistant Programme Manager Nazmul Huda Mina of Research & Policy, TIB were also present at the event.

The study was conducted to review how far the election was fair, neutral and legal and how the EC, political parties and candidates followed electoral laws and code of conduct. It also analysed the claims of the candidates about spending and reviewed the role of stakeholders of the election. The study followed a qualitative method including content analysis, interviews of information providers and observations. Information providers are candidates, party activists, law enforcers, returning officers and other election officials, including Electoral Tribunal officials, local journalists and voters. The study also used secondary sources of information like laws and regulation, published and unpublished research reports as well as newspaper reports.

It termed the election "partially participatory, non-competitive, questionable and faulty" and demanded a judicial inquiry into the reported irregularities during the election. The study, based on interviews of election stakeholders including law enforcement agencies, candidates and voters, was conducted between November 10 last year and January 10 this year in randomly selected 50 out of 299 constituencies that went to polls on December 30. Of the 50 seats, the ruling Awami League candidates won 40, Jatiya Party six, Gono Forum two while BNP and JP-Manju won one each.

Speaking at the press conference, Dr. Iftekharuzzaman, executive director of TIB, said, "Faulty election will hamper democracy." He added, "The Election Commission failed to act neutrally and the role of a section of polling officers and law enforcement agencies were biased." The Executive Director of TIB also said not all the candidates were allowed to conduct electioneering freely while voters faced obstacles to casting their votes. So, this election was partially participatory, he added.

The report says the “50 seats under 45 districts of nine divisions were covered in the survey. Irregularities were witnessed in at least one or more voting centres of 47 out of 50 constituencies. Ballot papers stamping took place the night before the elections in 33 constituencies, stamping ballots openly after occupying booths in 30 seats on the Election Day and non-availability of ballot papers in 22 constituencies.

The study found ballot boxes filled-up prior to the beginning of polling in 20 constituencies; voters forced to cast vote for a particular symbol in 26 constituencies, people barred from going to centers in 26 seats, voters were driven away from polling centers in 21 seats and beating up supporters of opponents in 11 constituencies. The survey found the casting of fake votes in 41 seats, silence of the administration and law enforcing agencies in 42 seats, obstructing, and driving out polling agents in 29 seats.

* In the 29 constituencies, polling agents were prevented from going to the center, there were no agents in 10 constituencies.
Since the election schedule announcement till the voting, the study found, the election-related expenditure of a candidate was Tk 77,65,085 in those seats, three times the amount fixed by the Election Commission. A candidate can spend maximum Tk 25 lakh in electioneering, according to the EC. In terms of the expenditure, the ruling AL candidates were in the top position as they spent five times the ceiling while the independent candidates were in the lowest. The study found 41 AL candidates spent Tk 1.34 crore each on an average, followed by its alliance partner Jatiya Party as eight of its candidates spent Tk 63 lakh each. A total of 107 candidates of several parties came under the survey.

The study found that AL candidates violated election code of conduct more than others. It said 95 per cent AL candidates violated election code of conduct by bringing out processions or holding “showdowns” using vehicles, while 88 per cent JP candidates and 31 per cent BNP candidates did the same offence. Eighty per cent AL candidates, 75 per cent JP and 44 per cent BNP candidates pasted posters violating the electoral code. Seventy-eight per cent AL candidates created an obstacle to street rallies, indoor meetings and other electioneering of other candidates violating the electoral code, while 50 per cent JP and 2.8 BNP candidates did the offence.

TIB in its report alleged that EC in maximum cases was unable to play a proper role during the election process. It did not take effective steps for ensuring all parties' participation in the election. No role was played to create equal scope for electioneering for all parties. The EC also failed to create an example by taking steps against electoral code violation by ruling party men. “While in one hand the EC has failed to create a level playing field for all parties and candidates, on the other hand difference of opinions of commissioners regarding it became public,” the report said. The EC also made “transparency of election” questionable by controlling the flow of information, slowing down internet speed and putting a restriction on the election observers, it said.

TIB placed six points’ recommendations: Honest, capable, brave and neutral people have to be appointed as the Chief Election Commissioner and other Election Commissioners. An act determining the process and eligibility of the recruitment of election commissioners must be enacted; The EC, administration, law enforcing agencies and other stakeholders have to be neutral and free from the party influences in order to ensure fair, free and fair elections held under a party government; A fair and neutral investigation must be taken in the 11th National Parliament Elections based on the multiple violations of the code of conduct including violence and use of force in elections; The EC must declare publicly identifying their failure in taking effective measures in violation of the code of conduct. On the other hand, along the steps undertaken by the EC, initiatives should be taken for judicial inquiry by the government; Digitalization should be initiated in different stages of the election process (such as updating the voter list, withdrawal and submission of application for nomination, verification of candidates’ financial information, submission of return of election expenditure etc.). Political parties also have to be encouraged for digitalizing candidates’ nomination process and free environment should be ensured for election observer and mass media.
